Osler's Notes

Let us bury the worries of yesterday in the work of today. Some little tincture of Saturn may be allowed in our hearts, but never in our faces. Sorrow and sadness must come to each one – it is our lot... We can best oppose any tendency to melancholy by an active life of unselfish devotion to others.